What does Fair Dealing look like?

STUDENTS
- Copy a photo from a book for school
- Share an article with a classmate
- Photocopy a short excerpt from a book for research
- Receive in-class handouts from your instructor
- Use part of a song or video for an assignment

INSTRUCTORS
- Share short excerpts of works with your students
- Email a colleague a journal article
- Provide access to the materials students need to learn and innovate
- Show short music of video clips in class
- Deliver relevant content through a diverse range of reading material

What is the Purpose of the Dealing?

2-Step Test with 6 Factors to Consider

Step 1
- Research
- Private study
- Education
- Parody
- Satire
- Criticism
- Review
- News reporting

Step 2
Consider these 6 Factors
- The purpose of the copying
- The character of the copying
- The amount of the copying
- The nature of the work
- Available alternatives to the copying
- The effect of the copying on the work

February 25 to March 1, 2019

Fair Dealing Week is an annual celebration of Fair Dealing in Canada!

The Canadian Copyright Act allows for the use of copyright-protected works without permission or payment under certain conditions for specific purposes, and this is called Fair Dealing.

Fair Dealing is a user's right that balances the scales of copyright and allows for learning, innovation, and creativity amongst users.

The Copyright Act is currently under review and the protection of Fair Dealing is crucial. Learn about Fair Dealing and share how it is important to you using the hashtag #fairdealingworks copyright@centennialcollege.ca

https://libraryguides.centennialcollege.ca/copyright/fairdealing